extend her territorial possessions in America, this is directly in violation of the Monroe doctrine, and will never be submitted to by the United States.

This commits the United States to a position which must be adhered to, and the Administration is prepared to stand by it, and believes it will have the support of Congress and of the country therein.

President Cleveland is eager to have a reply to the declaration of this Government as soon as possible, and Ambassador Bayard is instructed to secure a response if possible in time for the President to treat the matter in his annual message to Congress. But Great Britain may consume all the time she likes in making a response, within reasonable limits, and an answer during the next sixty days is scarcely to be expected.

There is nothing sudden in the determination of the State Department to bring the long-pending controversy to an issue. Secretary Gresham made vigorous efforts to induce Great Britain to submit the matter to arbitration, and when the British Foreign Office finally replied expressing a willingness to arbitrate as to the territory west of the Schomburg line and refused to submit the region east of that line to such an adjudication it was fully determined to press the matter again in a more vigorous way.

At the request of President Cleveland, Mr. Olney, while still holding the office of Attorney-General and before Secretary Gresham's death, began an exhaustive legal investigation of the various boundary lines in dispute. He made a most exhaustive report on the subject, which, while it in no way changed the policy of the Administration, thoroughly convinced the President and the other members of the Cabinet that the admission by this country of Great Britain's claims to Venezuela territory west of the Schomburg line will be a complete abandonment of the Monroe doctrine.

It is well known that when Sir Julien Pauncefote was selected to represent Great Britain at Washington the British Government was largely influenced by the fact that he was thoroughly familiar with the Venezuela boundary dispute, which, it was foreseen even then, might at any moment become a question of great importance between the two countries. It was Sir Julian who, as an Under Secretary of the Foreign Office in London, conducted most of the correspondence with the Venezuelan Government on the boundary question.—S. F. Examiner, Oct. 15, 1895.

Cleaning Up.

The Spreckels' in San Francisco have started a clean sweep up in their maritime department. Captain Morse of the Alameda, and Haskell of the tug Fearless have got the g. b. The Pacific Mail Co. has at the same time removed Captain Ward of the City of Peking.

No reasons for these removals have been given to the public. The retirement of Captain Morse from active service is deplored here by his numerous friends. The old captain of the Alameda was one of the most popular men in the service of the company.

Captain von Oterendorf will succeed Morse, Clem Randall will have charge of the Fearless and G. C.
Trask, formerly first officer of the City of Peking, will take command of that vessel.

To close them out Shirt Waists, formerly selling at $1.50 each, have been reduced to $1; and Pith Hats, which were selling at $2, from this on will be sold at $1 each. Call early before the supply is exhausted. A. Barnes, New Republic Building, King street.
